My Story

Garfield is a handsome red/orange bobtail boy. He loves other kitties, Temptations and being gently brushed and petted. He is quickly becoming a lap cat. He is learning that laps mean snacks. His favorite toys are plastic springs. He is pretty independent but is starting to become more confident and comes out from his cat cave to visit. He does startle easily though, hides then pops his head out when he realizes all is well. This is a very quiet kitty. I don't think he has meowed since we got him. He is a fan of brushing and his favorite spot for scratches is his shoulders and above his tail. Speaking of his tail, it is quite unique and puffs up like a cotton tail when he's startled.

Patterns

Visual Framework - All pages are using the visual framework for website consistency by using the same header, footer navigation, color scheme, fonts, and general page layout. This reduces confusion for the user as there are no surprises going from page to page. This includes Feature, Search, and Browse.

Feature, Search, and Browse - Homepage with some elements on the other pages with navigation and search at the top and bottom of the browser. On pages other than the homepage breadcrumbs are used so the user can navigate back or just jump back to the homepage.

Sitemap Footer - All Pages, while this sample site only has a few pages listed, a full version of the site would be a bit more complex and having a more robust organized footer navigation would be beneficial for the user. I have included contact info, menus, links to partners, socials, and newsletter sign up.

Sign-in tools - Users can sign in from any page. The home page has the generic user icon and a sign in/register link for users to sign in. Signing in allows users of different user levels to access separate functions of the site. Potential adopters can mark favorites on the cats to select ones they are interested in, Volunteer fosters can update pictures and update most information except for Information regarding the base cat information.

Cards - the Adoption Search page uses cards in a grid pattern for the cats that has some general information for each cat. The information includes Name, ID, Breed, Sex, Age, and Favorite count. The card/grid layout shows equal importance for each cat, preferences for order can be set as that would be a user preference. The default could be set sort by oldest, the page itself is currently shown by most popular order.

Accordion - The search page uses accordions to open and close filter criteria. Criteria for the breeds and colors (grouping similar content) can be lengthy and cause unnecessary scrolling for the user if they are just browsing or using the quick search options on top of the grid.

Carousel - Detail Page - The detail page uses a carousel to showcase images of each cat and scrolls horizontally with back and forth buttons as well as a image indicator/selector underneath with a visual cue as to what image is currently being shown in the cycle. It allows users to browse the images as they wish. While not shown, a modal box could be used to show a larger image of the selected image.

Pagination - Search Page, The search page (which did not save on the current pdf for the search) I will correct if possible. It would clearly indicate the number of pages of images based on the grid layout for number of results per page. Using arrows for previous and next to and highlighting with a square/rectangle outline for the current page number.

“Done” button or Assumed Next Step - Homepage, Search Page, Profile page - The home page has a donate button present in the top image, as most rescues are non-profits and rely on donations. Below the main intro image are the 3 ways to help, adopt, volunteer and donate, setting clear expectations on what a user can do to help. The search page uses the apply filters which would change to clear filters at the bottom of the filter list. The top filters would be automatically applied for the “I would like to ...” and the sort selector on the right. The profile page uses a save changes button. A notification for changes being save would also appear so the user would know the changes have been saved.

Forgiving Formats - Profile Page - The zip/postal code and phone number would be set to automatically format or return an error message if the wrong number of numbers are entered. Back end use of regular expressions and javascript could assist in formatting, This pattern makes it easier for the user to just enter digits and not worry about the format with parentheses or dashes. This pattern relies on the programming side more than the UID, but noting its usefulness on any input that uses numbers such as dates, phone, zip, credit card, State short codes could be in a forgiving / smart format as well.

Input Hints - Profile page, search page - The profile page would have greyed out placeholder text to show sample explanatory text to be entered in each field, Firstname, Lastname, phone as (xxx) xxx-xxxx. The search page uses input hints in the quick “I would like to...” search at the top of the results grid. In both cases the input hints help users quickly understand and not guess what the context is for the content to be input, therefore reducing their cognitive load
